

Second Home Development in Resort Communities: Measuring and Understanding the Impacts

Linda Venturoni, Principal
Venturoni Surveys and Research, Inc.
Keystone, Colorado

Tuesday, April 12, 2011
Science and Technology Building C309
4:00 to 5:00 p.m.

Linda Venturoni is the lead researcher and author of numerous reports on second home development and one of the nation's leading authorities on how to most effectively identify, measure and understand the many and varied affects of second homes. Such effects encompass the economy, the environment, transportation, business development, employee housing and the integration of non-resident property owners with full-time residents to maintain a viable and effectively working community.

Sponsored by:

The Center for Sustainable Tourism
Urban and Regional Planning Program, Department of Geography
Master of Public Administration Program, Department of Political Science