

Gloria Bailey is a creative preserver of history focused on diversity and outreach. She recently sponsored an event called Creative Conversations. She collaborated with America for the Arts, a non-profit organization that supports various artists across the country. Her event was apart of the October National Artist fest. She acted as the liaison and also the advocate for diversity awareness among ethnic groups within the arts. Her events are designed to educate various communities about the leadership within the arts of different ethnicities. Mrs. Bailey feels there is a need for chronicle history because it is melting away. She has spoken to communities within

Stokes, North Carolina about considering outreach and embracing outreach as means of uplifting others. Along with speaking to various communities in North Carolina, Mrs. Bailey is currently working to increase diversity within the College of Fine Arts and Communication. She hopes to create an inclusive atmosphere for people and their point of views. Mrs. Bailey enjoys the moments she spends with her husband and children, as well as meeting and interacting with people of diverse backgrounds.
