HISTORY
From 2001-2014, the NEWMUSIC@ECU Festival brought a series of five-seven concerts of provocative and engaging contemporary music to Greenville, NC stages. Hundreds of guest artists—composers, soloists and ensembles—have lent their voices, expertise and perspective to Master Classes, discussions about the arts and contemporary culture, and intensively focused work with students, faculty and audiences.

Over the course of fourteen festivals we have presented early 500 compositions that have never been heard in this region, including 115 world premiere performances and numerous commissions. Audiences have heard dozens of concerts, with performers coming from as far away as the California, Boston, New York City, Chicago, St. Louis, Florida, and as close as Winston-Salem, Durham, Greensboro, and Chapel Hill.

In 2014, a newly expanded mission added programs in commissioning, audience engagement, and community involvement, and a new name reflects this broadened reach: we are now the NORTH CAROLINA NEWMUSIC INITIATIVE.

ABOUT THE INITIATIVE
The goals of the initiative are twofold: to build a diverse audience base through events featuring extraordinary artists, and to be a forum for interaction with the composers and performers who are driving our continually evolving music-making and music-listening world.

An integral part of the NewMusic Initiative is a composer-in-residence program. Each year, nationally recognized composers are invited to our community. These composers conduct Master Classes with graduate and undergraduate composition students at ECU, coach performers, discuss their works through pre-concert lectures, and meet with audiences as post-concert receptions.

Central to the initiative’s mission of uncovering new ideas is a composition competition open to applicants worldwide. The winners’ music is rehearsed, performed and recorded by an ensemble of ECU School of Music performers. The 2001 and 2002 festivals presented works for chamber ensembles, and the 2003 and 2004 festivals focused on choral music. In 2005 we began an annual Orchestral Composition Competition which now annually attracts hundreds of submissions from the world over, with entrants from every continent. The competition has become a highlight of our orchestra’s programming, with each season’s winning composer serving as composers-in-residence during the festival, coaching students in the presentation and interpretation of their works.

As indicated in ECU’s mission statement, “Through its diverse curricula at the graduate and undergraduate levels, resulting music presentations, and the various artistic endeavors of the students and faculty, the School is committed to serving and furthering music in the cultural life of the University, community, and society at large.”
