

Julie Coiro is an assistant professor of reading in the School of Education at the University of Rhode Island. Previous to that, Julie worked as Co-Director of The New Literacies Research Lab at the University of Connecticut. Her research interests include reading comprehension strategy instruction, the new literacies of the Internet, and effective practices for technology integration and professional development. She is currently Co-PI on a four-year federal research project to develop valid and reliable assessments of online reading comprehension. In 2009, Julie was a distinguished finalist for the International Reading Association's Dissertation Award and, in 2011 she received the Early Career Research Award from the Literacy Research Association. Julie is a former middle school and elementary school teacher and has provided professional development to teachers around the country for the past 20 years. Her work appears in venues such as Reading Research Quarterly, The Reading Teacher, Journal of Literacy Research, Educational Leadership, Journal of Adolescent and Adult Literacy, and the 2nd Edition of the International Handbook of Literacy and Technology. She is co-author of the 4th edition of the book Teaching with the Internet K-12: New Literacies for New Times (2004) and co-editor of the Handbook of Research on New Literacies (2009).