

Environmental Health Sciences & Safety Careers

Dedication to Improving the Quality of Life through Environmental Education and Protection

Why A Degree In Environmental Health Sciences?

Environmental Health Professionals are dedicated to improving the quality of life and health through environmental education and protection. This leads to the highest quality career satisfaction and continued professional growth. Our graduates hold exciting jobs and possess a strong sense of civic duty.

What Jobs Could I Expect With This Degree?

Our graduates are very successful - Excellent, well paying opportunities are available such as:

Environmental Health Specialist	Industrial Hygienist
Food Sanitarian	Hazardous Substances Specialist
Food Safety Professional	Environmental Protection Specialist
Water and Wastewater Management Specialist	Public Health Specialist
Counter Terrorism Specialist

What Classes Would I Be Taking In This Department?

Environmental Health courses are science-based. Core courses in Chemistry, Biology, Physics, Microbiology, and Physiology are necessary to prepare for our curriculum. This curriculum includes courses such as:

Environmental Technology	Industrial Hygiene
Food Sanitation	Air Pollution & Air Pollution Control
Radiation Protection	Occupational Disease
Epidemiology	Water & Wastewater Treatment
Solid & Hazardous Waste Management	Disease Vector Control

Student Organizations in the Program:

Epsilon Nu Eta - National Honor Society for the Environmental Health Professional
Student Environmental Health Club

For More Information:

Contact the program of Environmental Health Sciences and Safety at 252.328.4434 or visit our website: <http://www.ecu.edu/hhp/ehst>