RECIPIAL AT E. C. T. S.

By Miss Bishop, Pianist, and Mr. Austin, Baritone.

They were fortunate people who assembled in the auditorium of East Carolina Teachers' Training school, Thursday night, to attend the recital by Miss Fannie May Bishop, music teacher of the institution, assisted by Prof. Herbert E. Austin, instructor in the science department. It was a "feast of music the equal of which one rarely has the opportunity of hearing. Miss Bishop is truly an artist on the piano, her touch, movement and interpretation being that of a master musician. The composer whose selection she used could not have wished for a finer interpreter, and her own impromptu number was the equal of any on the program.

Mr. Austin's singing was superb. He possesses a rich baritone voice that is the soul of sweetness and tenderness.

The program, as previously published, was rendered, the audience expressing such delight that several encore were given. It was an occasion of great joy to every one present, and it made all feel deeper pride in the Training school and its splendid faculty.

PATENT ONLY APPLIED FOR.

Gritten, N. C., May 20, 1910.

Editor Reflector:

Just say to your Harahan correspondent that he is a little too opposite about the automatic coupler. I have not received a patent for it yet. Patent is only applied for, but I have no fears about getting it in time when the patent office takes its up for decision, as there is nothing in the office it conflicts with in any way like it.

President Wright introduced
Hon. Charles B. Aycock, who delivered the address. In beginning Gov. Aycock expressed regret at the absence of Gov. Jarvis in whose mind this institution was conceived, and paid him a tribute as governor, U. S. minister and Senator, but said in old age he is doing his greatest work in the advancement of education and Christianity.

"I am going to make a speech which I expect some of you have never heard before. If you have—they have mercy on you."

Governor Aycock then took up his theme of education (the he was known as our educational governor) and said he would repeat what he had uttered several times before, that he is in favor of educating everybody, and he would go on further and say he was in favor of educating everything. Education is not only good for people, but it is good for animals and vegetables. We call it improving the Irish potato when we increase its value as a food product, but we are only educating the potato. We call it breaking a mule when we go about training the young animal for service, but we are merely educating him. If education is good for potatoes and mules, it is better for folks.

If we educate everybody, does it mean everybody will be equal? Not at all. One star differs from another star in glory. It is for us to say who will be greatest and who will be least, that is for God to determine. But it is up to us to give all an equal chance and then let God choose the greatest from among them. If we educate everybody, some will continue to be ditches and some will continue to split rails.

"There is big jobs and little jobs, but it should be the tall man, all his respective sphere. If a thing is worth having, it must be worth fighting for."
