

Model UN Activities

The ECUMUN Club had a great semester this fall. We began by attending the Carolinas Conference in Charlotte where 18 delegates represented ECU in the various councils. Shivani Salunke and Ryan Cobey received a “Distinguished Delegation” award for their representation of Qatar in the League of Arab States. Later in the semester the ECUMUN Club attended the inaugural Duke International Crisis Simulation in Durham where Samuel Vermeulin received the “Outstanding Delegate” award for his representation of Alaska in a futuristic North American regional union. We ended the semester by hosting the 11th Annual ECUMUN High School Conference. By all accounts, the conference was a great success as approximately 250 students from 11 area high schools participated in the event. Acknowledgements go out to all committee chairs and co-chairs, as well as ECUMUN club members who served admirably in their support roles.

Faculty News

Dr. Jody Baumgartner published two articles in 2008 on the vice presidency, one of which predicted who the presidential candidates would pick as their nominees, the other an assessment of the vice presidency of Dick Cheney. He also published, with Jonathan Morris, several articles on the effects of different types of political humor (most notably, The Colbert Report). In addition, he collaborated on two articles examining the role of evangelical Christian beliefs on political attitudes in America

Dr. David P. Conradt had a very active year. During the past year he was very active both inside and outside the classroom. The ninth edition of his standard work, The German Polity, was published by Houghton-Mifflin. The book is used in over 300 colleges and universities in the United States and Europe. He also contributed a chapter to an edited volume on modern German politics, Launching The Grand Coalition (Berghahn Books). Currently he is completing work on his co-authored book, Politics In Europe (Congressional Quarterly Press). In the "real world" he served on the Pitt County Board of Elections. The 2008 primary and general elections saw a record turnout and a corresponding number of Board Meetings. For the first time ever ECU students and staff could vote early at an on-campus site. He is now looking forward to some quality meetings with his new grandson!

Dr. Alethia Cook researches a variety of challenges national and international security, including emergency response to acts of terrorism, dealing with pandemic disease (whether naturally occurring or from bioterrorism), activities to stop radiological and nuclear terrorism, and US / Iran relations. In the past year, she presented her work at two conferences. She had an article entitled "Pandemic Disease: A Past and Future Challenge to Governance in the United States" published in the Review of Policy Research this fall and has another on the securitization of disease out for review. She has also completed work on two books that are due out in 2009: one on US / Iran relations and another that analyzes the emergency response to the Oklahoma City bombing.

Dr. Thomas Eamon has completed drafts of 12 chapters in the book Deliver Us From Evil: North Carolina Politics and the American Dream, under contract with the UNC Press. He also completed a chapter in the book The New North Carolina Politics. Dr. Eamon also presented a paper at the Citadel Symposium on Southern Politics in Charleston, South Carolina, last spring, titled "The Progressive Movement in North Carolina Politics: A Blend of Ideologies." He continues to love teaching, and enjoys today's students of political science.

Dr. Rhonda Evans Case, as a College Research Award winner from the Harriot College of Arts and Science, is on leave in the spring 2009 semester. In addition to completing existing projects, she will begin work on a new research project that examines the judicialization of refugee policy in Australia, a project that is also supported by a grant from the American Political Science Association. She delivered a paper entitled "Representing Refugees 'Down Under': The Refugee Advocacy Service of South Australia" at the University of Texas School of Law on February 11, 2009, as part of its Human Rights Happy Hour Speakers Series. She is also organizing the annual conference of Australian and New Zealand Studies Association of North America, of which she is in her final term as President. The conference was held at the University of Calgary, February 26-28, 2009. Evans Case had two articles accepted for publication recently: (1) "Friends or Foes? The Commonwealth and the Human Rights and Equal Opportunity Commission in the Federal Courts" in Australian Journal of Political Science (forthcoming); and (2) "Institutional Appendage: Vice Presidencies in Comparative Perspective," with Jody Baumgartner, in Congress and the Presidency (forthcoming). In addition, she has one forthcoming book chapter: "Immigration and Anti-Discrimination Policy: Regulating the 'New Face of Europe,'" with Terri Givens, Carrie Humphreys, and Adam Luedtke in Adam Luedtke (ed.), Migrants and Minorities: The European Response (Cambridge Scholars Press, forthcoming).

Dr. Peter Francia was nominated for the Board of Governors Distinguished Professor for Teaching Award by the College of Arts and Sciences. He is the associate editor of the upcoming Congressional Quarterly Press volume Guide to Interest Groups and Lobbying. Partnering with Costas Panagopoulos, they have a forthcoming article in Public Opinion Quarterly, "Poll Trends: Labor Unions in the United States." He also authored along with two colleagues "Is it Really Red Versus Blue? Politics, Religion, and the Culture War Within?" which appeared in the American Review of Politics. Last, he has been named the co-chair of the American Political Science Association's Working Group on Labor and Politics.

Faculty News

Dr. Younhee Kim had an article accepted this November, "Mapping the Terrain of Public Service Quality Improvement: Twenty-five Years of Trends and Practices in the United States," with Marc Holzer and Etienne Charbonneau in International Review of Administrative Sciences (forthcoming). This article will be published in three languages: French, English, and Spanish. She is also co-authoring two book chapters: Citizen Participation and Direct Democracy through E-Networking: Possibilities and Experience with Carmine Scavo (forthcoming 2009); and What Do CIO's Need to Know about Performance Measurement of E-governance? (forthcoming 2009) with Marc Holzer and Aroon Manoharan. Her grant report, Technology Transfer and Commercialization in the United States (written in Korean), will be published in March 2009.

Dr. Brad Lockerbie's book Do Voters Look to the Future? Economics and Elections (State University of New York Press) came out this past summer. He also is at work on a coauthored book entitled Voting and Campaigning under contract with Oxford University Press. He recently published an article on economics and voting behavior in the American Review of Politics. His article on public opinion polling and support for the war in Iraq in Social Science Quarterly came out this past summer. His work on forecasting the presidential and House elections (in which he did a pretty good job) came out this past fall in PS: Political Science and Politics. He was interviewed by both local and national media outlets concerning the 2008 elections. Last, he presented a talk on the presidential nomination process before the Close Up Foundation in Pitt County.

Dr. William Mangun co-authored an article with Amy Blizzard entitled "Intergovernmental Influences on the Implementation of Coastal Zone Management in the Southeast United States" published in Ocean & Coastal Management, 51 (2008) 443-449. He and Kara Craig also presented papers at the Western Social Science Association meeting in Denver, Colorado, and the International Symposium on Society and Resource Management at Burlington, Vermont. Respectively, the papers were entitled "Stakeholder Beliefs about Endangered Species Management Strategies at Cape Hatteras National Seashore" and "Dune Buggies and Bird Eggs: Stakeholder Beliefs and Attitudes Toward Endangered Species Management Strategies at Cape Hatteras National Seashore."

Dr. Jonathan S. Morris co-edited a book with Jody Baumgartner titled Laughing Matters: Humor and American Politics in the Media Age. He also published several articles, including (1) "Jon Stewart Comes to Class:

The Learning Effects of America (The Book) in Introduction to American Government Courses," with Jody Baumgartner, Journal of Political Science Education, (2) "Is it Really Red versus Blue? Politics, Religion and the Culture War Within," with Jody Baumgartner, Peter L. Francia, and Carmine P. Scavo, American Review of Politics and (3) "One 'Nation' Under Stephen? The Effects of The Colbert Report on American Youth," with Jody Baumgartner, Journal of Broadcasting and Electronic Media. He also coauthored a book chapter titled, "The Internet in Election Campaigns in the United States," with Richard Davis, Jody Baumgartner, and Peter L. Francia, in Philip N. Howard and Andy Chadwick's (eds.), The Handbook for Internet Politics, New York: Routledge, 2008. He has an article titled, "The Daily Show with Jon Stewart and Audience Attitude Change during the 2004 Party Conventions," published in Political Behavior.

Dr. Marie Olson Lounsbury completed her book with Frederic Pearson (Wayne State University) entitled Civil Wars: Internal Struggles, Global Consequences (University of Toronto Press) this year and was scheduled to be published in January 2009. She also began an expansion of her project on Southeast Asian Intrastate Rivalries by traveling to the Peace Research Institute in Oslo, Norway, this past June. The project will result in several conference presentations in Spring 2009 in collaboration with Dr. Cook and ECU political science students Joshua Parker, Jason Robel, and Stuart Turner. Dr. Olson is also currently writing two articles dealing with the impact of military intervention on target state stability and the effectiveness of arms embargoes.

Dr. Dursun Peksen is in his first year as an assistant professor at ECU. He recently earned his PhD in political science from the University of Missouri. His research interests are international political economy, foreign policy analysis, and civil wars. His research work has appeared or is forthcoming in Human Rights Review, Journal of Peace Research, and Political Research Quarterly. His teaching areas include, introduction to international relations, American foreign policy, international political economy, globalization, and security studies.

Faculty News

Dr. Jalil Roshandel continues his work as the director of security studies. His book, The Great Satan and the Rogue State, US-Iran Relations: Policy Challenges and Opportunities, was expected to be published in February 2009. He recently authored a chapter entitled "National Security" in Glenn E. Curtis and Eric Hooglund's book Iran: A Country Study. He recently presented two research papers, Terrorism and Liberal Democratic Peace Theory at the 2nd International Conference on Ethics and International Relations at St. Paul University in Ottawa, Canada, and Dynamics of the Iran-Afghanistan Relationship at the Carleton University Center for Security and Defence Studies Series in Ottawa, Canada.

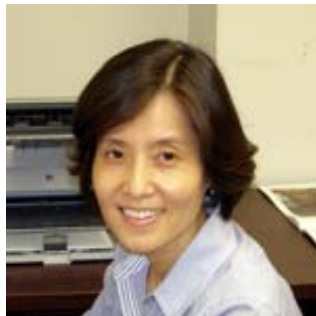

Dr. Nancy Spalding is preparing to teach the course on the Comparative and International Study of Genocide again this summer for the fourth time; there are beginning to be a variety of excellent books covering this difficult subject. Students will be writing one of their papers on one of many cases of Communist domination as "cultural genocide."

Dr. Bob Thompson has been active this past year as the co-chair of the Pitt County/Greenville Blue Ribbon Task to End Chronic Homelessness. This task force was charged with developing a 10-year plan strategic plan for the county and city on this issue. Over 350 communities across the country have embarked on a similar enterprise since 2003 and over 240 have completed their plans. The task force's plan was approved by the Pitt County Board of Commissioners and the Greenville City Council in September 2008 and was publicly unveiled in December of that year. Bob will continue to serve as a member of the advisory board being created to oversee implementation of the plan. He has also incorporated this experience in his research. Dr. Scavo and he have an article on North Carolina's experience with 10-year plans that has been accepted for Publius, a national journal focusing on federalism. A version of this manuscript will also be presented at the upcoming American Political Science Association's annual meeting in Toronto. They will continue their research in this area.

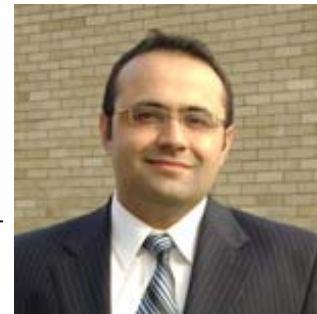

Welcome New Faculty

As noted, the department has a number of new faculty with us this year, and we would like to introduce them to you. If you are able to visit the department at some time, please feel free to talk with them.

Dr. Younhee Kim is an assistant professor. Prior to her arrival at ECU, she served as an assistant professor at the School of Public Affairs and Administration, Rutgers University-Newark. She earned her PhD in public administration in 2007 from Rutgers University-Newark. Her current research interests focus on performance management, information technology policy and e-government, and public entrepreneurship. She is conducting a grant project, Technology Transfer and Commercialization, to examine technology transfer mechanisms from research institutions to private companies for promoting a commercialization process. She is teaching quantitative methods for public administration this fall and will teach politics and management in public agencies and MPA professional paper in the spring.

Dr. Dursun Peksen is an assistant professor. He earned his PhD in political science in May 2008 from the University of Missouri. His research and teaching interests include foreign policy analysis, international political economy, coercive diplomacy, and civil wars. His research work appeared or is forthcoming in Journal of Peace Research, Political Research Quarterly, and Human Rights Review. He is teaching introduction to international relations and American foreign policies this fall, and the graduate seminar on American foreign relations in the spring.

Dr. Maurice D. Simon's Retirement

Maurice D. Simon, professor emeritus, will complete his third year of “phased retirement” in May 2009 and will be fully retired. Simon will complete his 40th year of university research and teaching—having taught at Williams College (1968-72), UNC-Greensboro (1973-84), and East Carolina (1984-present). Simon has specialized in East European (Polish) studies, comparative politics, and international relations. He is proudest of his research and publications on democratization and political culture in Poland during the 1980s and on the Polish parliament (Sejm) during the 1980s and 1990s. Simon served as Chair of the Department of Political Science 1984-1988 and encouraged a notable rise in faculty research and publications. He also played a strong role in the development of international studies at ECU, having served as director of international education in the Office of International Studies, 1988-1991.

Simon remembers fondly a number of outstanding students who have made his career exciting and gratifying. He hopes that he will hear from some of the following students (and others who he hasn't heard from in a long time): Mike Walker, Ted Barr, Luke Spencer, Josh Holshouser, Chris Barron, Steve Flippin, Keith Dyer, Justin Conrad, Michael Fox, Marvelle Sullivan, Carolina Orth, Teresa Boyd, Steve Whisnant, Carlos Ochoa, Reggie Robinson, Eric Fox, Worth Pascal, Dale Morrill, Sandra Singh, and many others.

Dr. Simon is still a die-hard ECU Pirate football fan, having attended every home game since 1984. On November 29, he served as faculty guest coach (for the third time) and was very proud of the team's 2008 championship performance.

He lives in Raleigh with his lovely wife, Judy, and has two sons, Jason and Aaron, and one granddaughter, Amelia Claire (age 3)—as well as two darling puppies, Zeke and Zoe.

Information for Donors

Donate $1,000 to the Department of Political Science at ECU, and your name will be featured on a special plaque in the department library. You will also receive a customized gift to show our appreciation. Funds donated to the department are used to improve the departmental library and classrooms and to provide student and faculty services. We encourage all alumni to consider giving, no matter the amount. We have a button on our Web shortly that will allow you to make contributions online. You may also choose to honor a special professor, public official, or relative by placing his or her name on the plaque. If you are interested in officially “naming” the library or a political science classroom, please contact Dr. Brad Lockerbie. Please send your tax-deductible contributions in any amount to:
